The University of Chicago / Teach For America Partnership

The University of Chicago Law School and Teach For America seek highly talented, diverse individuals to lead the efforts confronting some of our country's most pressing social issues. We have partnered to offer the following benefits for qualified individuals who wish to join Teach For America and then attend the University of Chicago Law School:

- The Law School will offer a two-year deferment to applicants who are accepted to Teach For America.
- The Law School will waive application fees for all current corps members as well as alumni of Teach For America.
- The University of Chicago Law School - Teach For America Fellowship has been established to set aside specific scholarship dollars for Teach For America Corps members and alumni. The Law School will provide $30,000 in scholarship funds to up to five newly admitted Teach For America alumni a year.
- One $35,000 scholarship per year will be awarded to a qualified alumnus/a pursuing a joint degree at the Law School and the Harris School of Public Policy. Corps members and alumni will receive full consideration for all other need and merit based tuition assistance.

Please inform both Teach For America and the University of Chicago Law School if you would like to apply.
