

The University of Chicago Law School

Welcome to the University of Chicago Law School!

Ours is a unique and engaged community, and we are excited to introduce ourselves to you.

When you choose a law school, you are choosing not only an educational institution, but the first step on your career path as a lawyer. It is important to think about who will be teaching and guiding you, who will be sharing your classrooms, what opportunities will be available to you in the summer and after you graduate, what kind of student experience you will have, and, perhaps most of all, what training and relationships you will be taking with you that will stay with you for the rest of your life.

As you will see here and on our website, we are very proud of UChicago Law's answers to those questions and we cannot wait to tell you more. Read up on us, and then meet us virtually—we want you to experience for yourself the best legal education in America. All of us at the Law School look forward to meeting you.

What is the UChicago Law classroom experience like? Our professors are committed to teaching and our students are devoted to learning for learning's sake. Faculty members expertly use the Socratic Method to engage students in an active dialogue, and use their training from other academic disciplines to deepen discussions that often continue well after class time. Will I be able to get to know faculty members? Yes—better here than anywhere else. UChicago Law's small size makes faculty-student interactions a certainty. The warmth and intellectual engagement of our community make forming lasting relationships easy. Faculty frequently host students in their homes (even teaching classes there!), meet for meals in Hyde Park, learn together in small Greenberg seminars, and co-author papers together. These relationships continue for decades as students and teachers become professional colleagues. Meet our faculty at www.law.uchicago.edu/faculty.

What kinds of courses can I take?

In the 2020-2021 school year, students will experience a revolutionary new 1L curriculum. Along with the foundational legal classes, in the Spring Quarter, students choose one constitutional law class and take a legislation class. They will also take our new 1L course organized around transactions and continue their legal writing classes. As a 2L and 3L, you chart your own path through nearly 200 law courses and thousands of courses all over the University of Chicago. Explore our varied and deep curricular options at www.law.uchicago.edu/prospective/curriculum.

What opportunities do I have to get practical experience while I'm a student? UChicago Law has more than 15 clinics. Second and third year students can practice real litigation, advocacy, and corporate work. First year students gain practical experience through pro bono opportunities. We also offer a wide variety of experiential and simulation courses to prepare you for the practical work of being a lawyer. Learn more at www.law.uchicago.edu/experiential.

What kind of training will I get to prepare me for a lifelong career path? The Law School prepares you to be a lawyer, of course, but we also prepare you to lead in whatever career you choose. All students participate in systematic leadership development and training at the start of 1L year in the Kapnick Leadership Development Initiative. Dozens of programs during law school will focus on skills and knowledge you will need over the long term, and the Law School will continue to be a resource for you throughout the rest of your career. Learn more about Kapnick and other development programs at www.law.uchicago.edu/engagement.

What can I expect from student life outside the classroom? UChicago Law students participate in more than 60 student organizations ranging from affinity groups to community service organizations, chapters of politically active national organizations to groups that organize annual traditions like the Law School Musical and the weekly cocktail party, Wine Mess. Student diversity of every kind shows in the activities you can choose. Our students have a balanced approach to the world that makes the Law School both a vibrant place and an amazing jumping-off point for the future. In keeping with its long-standing tradition and policies, the University of Chicago considers students, employees, applicants for admission or employment, and those seeking access to programs on the basis of individual merit. The University, therefore, does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national or ethnic origin, age, disability, or veteran status, and does not discriminate against members of protected classes under the law. The Affirmative Action Officer (773.702.5671) is the University official responsible for coordinating the University's adherence to this policy and the related federal, state, and local laws and regulations (including Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, and the Americans with Disabilities Act).

Standard 504 of the American Bar Association requires that law schools advise each applicant as follows: "In addition to a bar examination, there are character, fitness, and other qualifications for admission to the bar in every U.S. jurisdiction. Applicants are encouraged to determine the requirements for any jurisdiction in which they intend to seek admission by contacting the jurisdiction. Addresses for all relevant agencies are available through the National Conference of Bar Examiners."

The University of Chicago reserves the right to make changes affecting policies, fees, curricula, or any other matters announced in this publication. This publication is not intended to be, nor should be regarded as, any part of a contract.

The University of Chicago annually makes information, including several reports and policies, available to its community and to prospective students and employees. These reports provide abundant information on topics from equity in athletics to campus safety, including several items for which federal law requires disclosure. Please visit csl.uchicago.edu/policies to access this important information. For reports not available on the Internet, the University will provide copies upon request.
