The University of Chicago Law School
“When you come to study at the Law School, you will join a small and diverse student body that is deeply committed to studying the law, developing life-long friendships and professional relationships, and changing the world.”

Thomas J. Miles
Dean and Clifton R. Musser Professor of Law

What is the UChicago Law classroom experience like? Our professors are committed to teaching and our students are devoted to learning for learning’s sake. Faculty members expertly use the Socratic Method to engage students in an active dialogue, and use their training from other academic disciplines to deepen discussions that often continue well after class time. Read more about our extraordinary legal education at www.law.uchicago.edu/academics-student-life.

Will I be able to get to know faculty members? Yes—better here than anywhere else. UChicago Law’s small size makes faculty-student interactions a certainty. Faculty frequently host students in their homes (even teaching classes there!), meet for meals in Hyde Park, learn together in small Greenberg seminars, and co-author papers together. Meet our faculty at www.law.uchicago.edu/faculty.

What kinds of classes can I take?
UChicago’s Quarter System lets you take more classes. In the 1L year, you take foundational legal classes, like property and torts, legal research and writing, and unique classes such as Elements of the Law, Transactional Lawyering, a legislation course, and two elective classes. As a 2L and 3L, you chart your own path through nearly 200 law classes and thousands of classes all over the University of Chicago. Explore our varied and deep curricular options at www.law.uchicago.edu/prospective/curriculum.

How will I gain practical experience while I’m a student?
UChicago Law has 15 clinics where second and third year students practice real litigation, advocacy, and corporate work. All students gain practical experience through pro bono opportunities. We also offer a wide variety of experiential and simulation courses to prepare you for the practical work of being a lawyer. Learn more at www.law.uchicago.edu/experiential.

$5,000 GUARANTEED SUMMER PUBLIC INTEREST FUNDING

How can I engage with other academic disciplines outside the Law School?
At UChicago Law, you can take classes at the other graduate divisions. You can research and engage with peers across the campus through our certificate-granting programs. Students can also pursue joint and dual degrees with our PhD programs and Masters Programs, including our three-year JD/MBA program. www.law.uchicago.edu/joint-degrees.

What can I expect from student life outside the classroom? UChicago Law students participate in more than 60 student organizations. Student diversity of every kind shows in the activities you can choose. Our students have a balanced approach to the world that makes the Law School both a vibrant place and an amazing jumping-off point for the future. More about student life is at www.law.uchicago.edu/life.

What are Hyde Park and the city of Chicago like? Hyde Park is a beautiful, vibrant neighborhood, and Chicago is a cosmopolitan, diverse, yet affordable city. It’s the best of both worlds: a world-renowned university in an international city. Information is available at visit.uchicago.edu/neighborhood-attractions/ and www.law.uchicago.edu/life.

Where can I work once I have a UChicago Law degree? Our graduates find work in every part of the legal profession. They work all over the country, including in our top five legal markets: New York, Washington DC, California, Texas, and Illinois. Our alumni work in more than 70 countries world-wide, leading the way in private practice, government, public service, business, academia, and the judiciary. Comprehensive employment data showing clerkships, types of employers, geographic information, and salaries are available at www.law.uchicago.edu/employment-data.
Will I be able to work in the public interest sector? Of course! UChicago Law graduates work in nearly 500 different public interest organizations and government entities. The Law School is proud to provide significant support to students and graduates entering public service through scholarships, substantial summer and postgraduate funding, and a generous loan forgiveness program.
